Content (Syllabus outline):

Predmet obravnava koncept skupnosti v sodobnem družbenem redu, ki ga označuje tehnološki razvoj, globalizacijski procesi in množični mediji. Uvodoma predstavi koncept človeške interakcije in skupnosti v družboslovnem smislu. Predmet razlikuje med različnimi tipi skupnosti in njihovim razvojem skozi čas. Poudarek predmeta pa je na vlogi globalizacije na oblikovanje in dožemanje skupnosti na katere vplivajo spremenjeni načini interakcije, vključujoč transnacionalne povezave in virtualne stike. V ospredju so koncepti identitet, identifikacij, odtujitve, racionalnosti, pripadanja, vključenosti in izključenosti. Povezuje paleto konceptov s sociološkimi in kulturno-antropološkimi teoretičnimi perspektivami.

Predmet se navezuje na spremembe v značilnostih človeške komunikacije in naraščajočo zmožnost ljudi zamišljanja in interakcij preko lokalnih in teritorialnih meja. Predmet tako obravnava družbo, kolektivnosti in posameznike, ki oblikujejo skupnosti v povezavi z družbenimi transformacijami kot so na primer:

- razvoj izključno segmentarnih prostorskih interakcij, ki temeljijo na plemenskih družbah v mestne države ter imperije, ki temeljijo na iznajdbi pisane besede
- nastanek nacionalnih zamišljenih skupnosti, ki temelji na množičnem tisku
- vplivi elektronskih medijev na globalizacijo v smislu globalne vasi in lokalizacijo v smislu močnega odpora etničnih in religiozних skupnosti
- naraščajoča transnacionalna mobilnost in identifikacije, ki jih podpira IKT in na transport vezane tehnologije
- on-line virtualne skupnosti, ki temeljijo na razvoju spleta

The course addresses the concept of community in contemporary social order signified with technological development, globalisation processes and mass media. Firstly, it introduces the concepts of human interaction and community in sociological terms. It distinguishes between different types of communities and their evolution. Further, the emphasis is on the role of globalisation processes in the formation and perception of communities, which are influenced by transformed ways of interaction, including transnational connections and virtual contacts. It deals with the issues such as identities, identifications, alienation, rationality, belonging, inclusion and exclusion. It links these issues to a variety of sociological theoretical perspectives.

The course relates to the shifts in the features of human communities including the increasing ability of people to imagine and interact beyond the narrow local and territorial boundaries. The course will thus deal with the society, collectivity and individuals forming communities related social transformations such as:

- From segmental purely spatial interactions based tribal societies to city-states and empires based on the invention of writing
- The formation of national imagined communities based on the printing-press
- Globalisation – localisation effect in forming collectivities, the mixed-effects of electronic media toward both the 'global village' and the strong persistence of ethnic/religious communities
- the increasing transnational mobilities and identifications increasingly supported by ICT and transport related technologies.
- On-line virtual communities based on the development of the web
